case after I had received the battery charge.
The outside, or the not-self, began to pour in, Hke rain, inspite of all that the self could do to guard itself against this uncalled for intrusion. If, for instance, instead of being able to take my meals according as I felt the need of, food began to force its way into my mouth and stuff my stomach against my will, not caring whether 1 required it or not, what do you think my condition then would appear to be? Would I not then become the very worst miserable creature on earth imaginable? It is fbr -this reason only that we find in the wise rule of Providence, specified limits and boundaries fixed for each individual soul ; to grow and develop according to his own individual nature or tendency, instead of getting confused in a muddle of diversities, resulting from the myriads of heterogeneous forces, that are working in nature, each according to its own individual bend or direction.

It appears to us quite a miracle, when we ponder over the fact that we are all of us being omstantly subjected to a pressure of atmosphere, which means a weight of thirty pounds, per square inch of space on our persons fr
